Crime Victims

Crime victims are individuals who have suffered as a result of a criminal act. They may be in immediate and long-term emotional and physical harm. Victims may also experience a wide range of reactions to the crime, including fear, anger, guilt, and depression. It is important for victims to receive support and resources to help them recover from the crime. This can include access to legal assistance, counseling, and financial support.

If you are a victim of a crime, you may contact the police department or the campus police department to report the crime and receive assistance. You can also contact a local victim's rights organization for support and guidance.

International Students & Scholars

International students and scholars may be especially vulnerable to crime, as they may be in a foreign country and may not be familiar with the local laws and customs. It is important for international students and scholars to be aware of the potential risks and to take steps to prevent crime.

If you are an international student or scholar, you may contact the International Student and Scholar Services office for support and resources to help you navigate the criminal justice system.
